The Life History of the Roneagle

As written by Miss Myrtle Watts for the initial issue of the yearbook in 1928

As the centuries, one after another, glide by, revelations more and more marvelous are brought to the ken of men. Perhaps the most extraordinary discovery of modern times is that of the Roneagle. This bird, beyond doubt the mightiest, swiftest, and most resourceful of all winged creatures, resembles in some respects the great American bald eagle. The Roneagle, however, is far larger in size; and it possesses a tremendous advantage over the other bird in that, through Mother Nature's inventiveness, its body - head, eyes, beak, breast, wings, talons, bones, muscles, nerves, and organs - is fashioned (marvel of marvels!) in Solid Iron! Because of this singular trait - which appears more miraculous when one discovers the bird accomplishing feats which, because of the great weight of even the iron feathers of its mighty pinions, would reasonably seem impossible - the creature has become known as the Roneagle - the iron eagle.

In only one spot in the world, the grim and sturdy structure known as Mc Donogh Thirty-five High and Normal School,¹ has the Roneagle chosen its aerie. There, beset with dangers before which weaker birds must flee, the Roneagle lives and thrives, requiring five years² to evolve from the egg to the adult stage. Persons who have braved the blistering heat, the bitter cold, the furious stormblast, one or another of which, amid thunder and lightning, constantly vents its fury about the haunt of the Roneagle, have been astounded to find that the bird feeds only on hard, cold iron. This substantial diet contributes much to the development of the bird's prodigious prowess and resourcefulness.

The first step in the life-cycle of the Roneagle is known as the embryonic state. Twice a year - in early September and late January -³ a number of eggs are brought into the world. From what has been said before, it will not seem strange to the reader to learn that these eggs are encased in shells of glittering steel, the reflection from which, as they glisten in the sunlight, is too strong for the naked eye. Each egg, protected by its strong armor from the dangers mentioned above, contains molten iron, which gradually takes the form of a tiny Roneagle.

By the end of a year⁴ the young creature has acquired enough strength to break its steel prison, and a young Roneaglet finds itself for the first time in the world of living things. The bird is, of course, much dependent; and it becomes the duty of old and weathered Roneagles to bring to its nest daily portions of baby iron-food.

A year passes by, and the Roneaglet reaches the third stage⁵ of its life history. The sinews and the jagged iron feathers of its wings are now sufficiently strong for the young creature to make its first attempts at flying. By the end of the season it has become reasonably sure of itself in the air beyond its nest. And what rejoicing fills the sky when old Roneagles make known the fact that the young bird has acquired enough strength and skill to be let fly away unaccompanied by older Roneagles!

During the fourth step⁶ in the life-cycle of the marvelous bird, it seems to find peculiar delight in out-distancing other winged creatures in flight. Miles above the clouds, unconscious of wind or rain or snow, its mighty pinions majestically outstretched, the Roneagle wings its way through the thin air with the speed of lightning.

Finally, during the fifth year⁷ after the laying of the great steel-shelled egg, the Roneagle emerges into the adult stage. Now the bird, having nourished itself for two years⁸ on the most substantial of iron-food; having been hardened by storm and sleet, by summer's feverish heat and winter's deadening cold; and having gained in strength and initiative through participation in numerous contests, becomes a most wonderful creature. Perhaps some intrepid aviator, having piloted his plane far, far above the top of the world, has seen an adult Roneagle.⁹ It has by this time taken part in many struggles and has conquered countless adversaries. It is probably seen perched on some lofty mountain summit, its mighty talons rending the jagged rock, its great iron wings coldly glittering, and its fierce steel eyes, alive with lightning, intently seeking among the far distant stars new worlds to conquer.

¹From 1924 to 1931, Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School offered a two-year Normal Training Course, a teacher training course.

²From September 1951 to present time, an eaglet now takes three years to evolve from the egg to the adult stage.

³Pupils were once admitted at mid-term. The Orleans Parish School Board discontinued mid-term promotion and mid-term graduation in 1951.

The Dawn of a New Era

Dedication

The "1966 Boneagle" is dedicated to the Parent-Teacher Association of our school and to the League of Women Voters of New Orleans. The dedication is given in recognition of the combined, untiring efforts of the two groups to preserve the image and the spirit of the Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School.

The history of Mc Donogh 35 will show the destruction of the old 77 year old physical structure at 655 South Rampart Street by Hurricane Betsy on September 9, 1965. It will also show the new home of the 1965-66 school family at 400 Camp Street and will give credit to the Parent-Teacher Association of Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School and to the League of Women Voters of New Orleans for their part in the relocation.

The age in which we are now living demands that each pupil strive to get the best education possible. Through the varied program of instruction at the Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School the students are motivated toward higher academic achievement. The PTA of our school and the League of Women Voters knew that this would have been lost if the student body of Mc Donogh 35 were scattered across the city. Surely, the unique grouping of students under the three track program would have been destroyed.

Yes, the Yearbook gives orchids to these two dedicated groups for the immediate action taken for the preservation of the historic school; this immediate action indicated to all their approval of the leadership, of the organization, of the philosophy, and of the program of studies in the school. Of this too, the Yearbook Staff is proud.

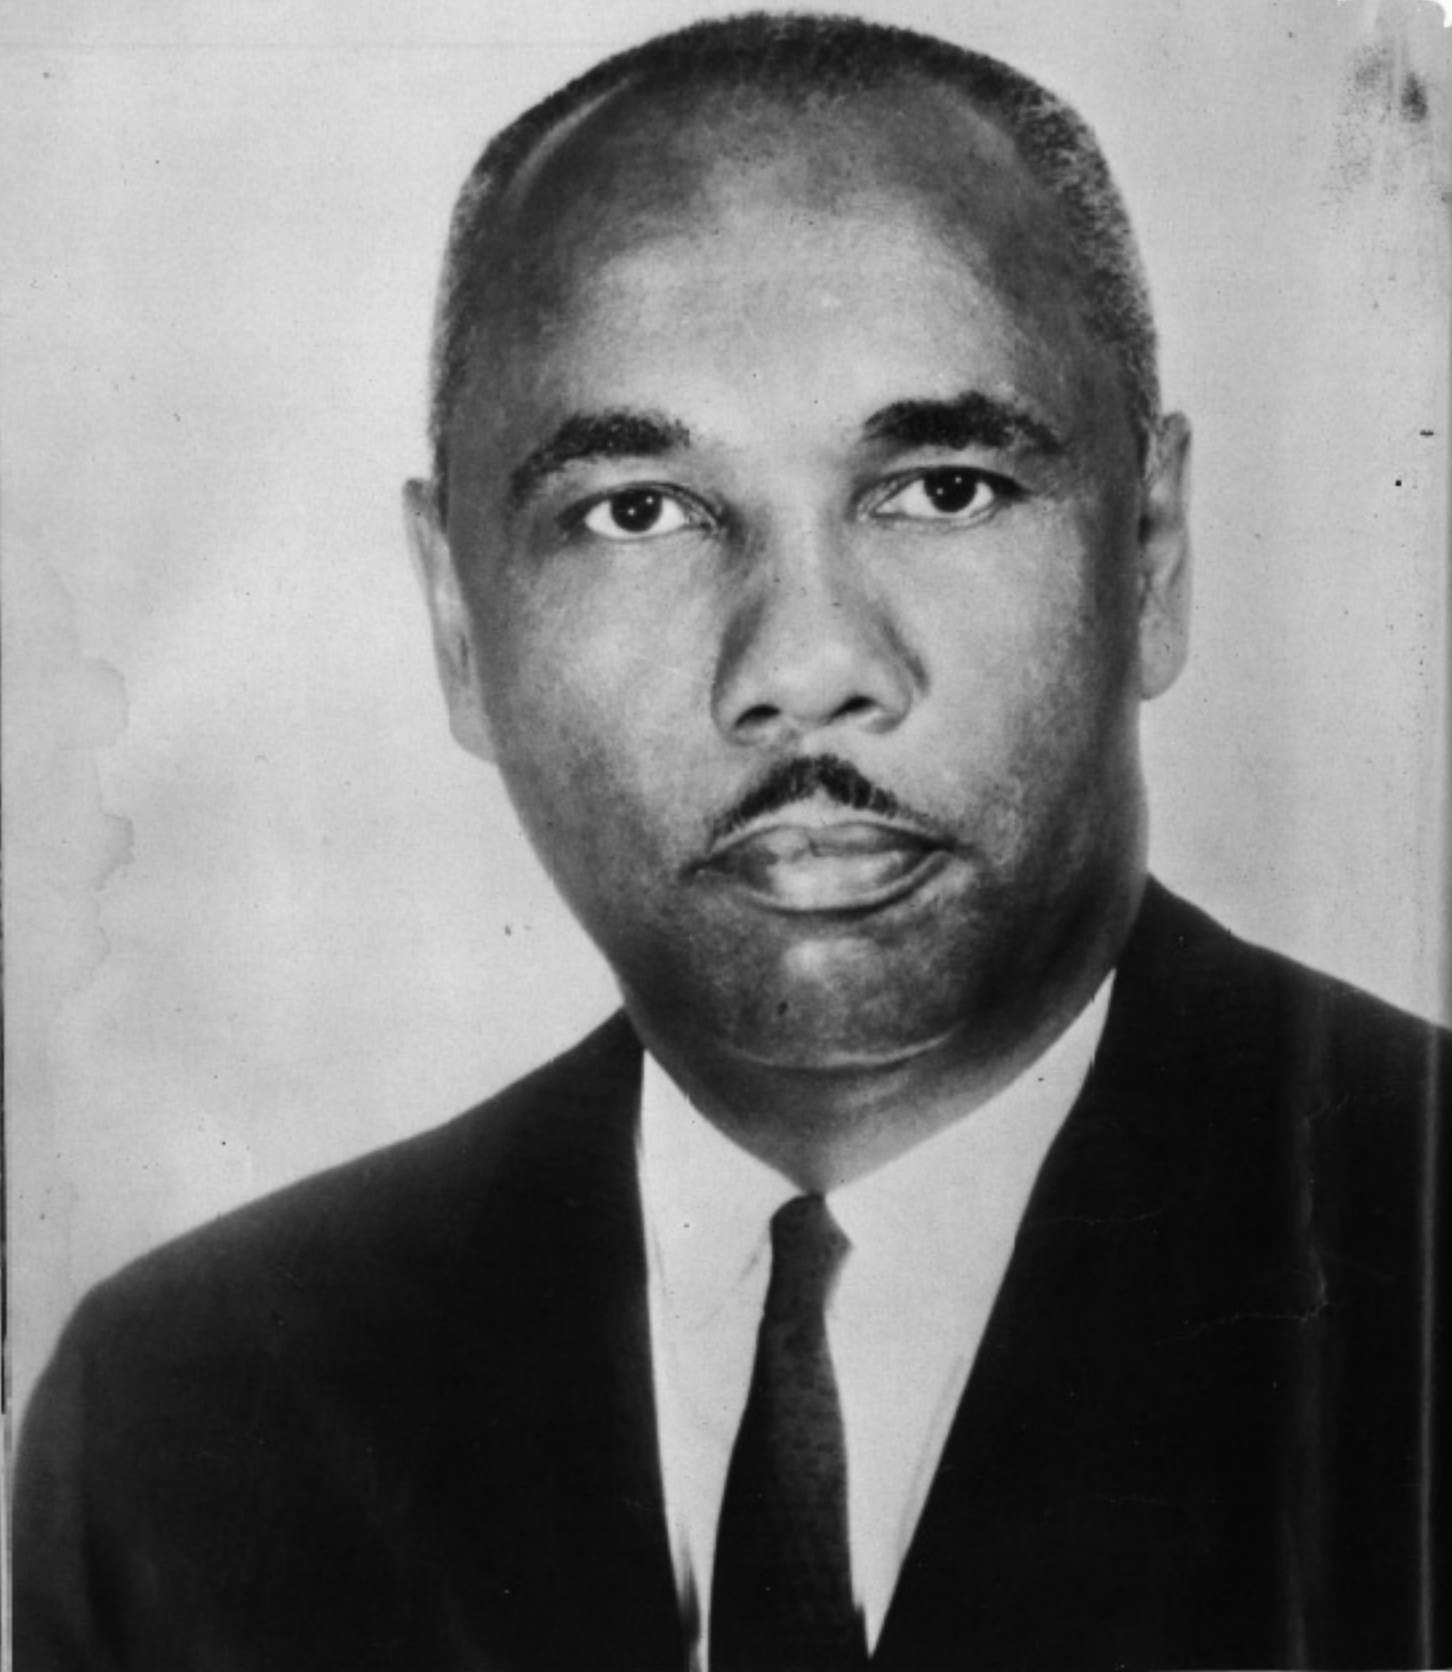

Thus, in a spirit of gratitude and of esteem, the school family proudly dedicates the "1966 Boneagle!" May the officers and the members of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School and of the League of Women Voters of New Orleans continue to be paradigms of high ideals that high school students will strive to emulate!

The Principal Speaks

DR. MACK JUSTIN SPEARS

Our Principal

"When I was in high school--" This expression will probably make you not want to read any further. Many of you, my young friends, take exception, and often with just cause, to adults bombarding you with reference to the days of their youth. We for some reason do have the tendency to take a backward look for compensations when we are unable to appreciate the alleged restlessness of the youth of this generation.

I should like to use our pet adult cliché as an approach to presenting a few concepts which seem sufficiently essential to be a part of our focus at the present. Let me then make a few brief references to the past. "When I was in high school", my teachers determined the courses which I should pursue, and they planned the organizational structure in which I should take them; I usually walked to and from school wearing a pair of shoes which cost the fabulous sum of $3.50; my lunch generally consisted of a bottle of milk and five cents worth of rolls which I shared with my friend; as I walked to school, I observed the excavations for the network of underground utility lines being dug by the hand labor of hundreds of men; only a few of my friends had access to a radio, and the television was not even in our imagination; the airplane was a novelty; mother washed on a wooden washboard in a galvanized tub behind the house; gathering wood and coal for the cook stove or the pen fireplace for heating was a chore for me.

Today, the high school student has guidance in planning with his parents his own program of studies. Through his student council, he helps to shape the school organization. This gives expression of an awareness that the individual himself should share in the making of decisions which affect him. This is consistent with the basic concept of the individual upon which the American democracy was established.

The family income has increased to the extent that the typical high school student rides to and from school, thus saving the thin soles of his "rather expensive" shoes. The student usually buys a hot plate lunch constituting a balanced meal, and he eats it in the pleasant atmosphere of the school cafeteria. Radios are in abundance to the point that the student has his personal portable. One is thought to be queer should he say that the family does not possess a television set. Every family has a "Hi-Fi" or "Stereo". Mother washes the clothes with the push of a button, and she merely turns a valve to begin her cooking. Heating of the house has become so automatic that one doesn't give it a thought unless trouble develops in the heating system.

The scientific and technological progress of the past thirty years has been tremendous. The installation of underground utility lines is accomplished with such speed the student probably pays little attention to it. However, should he pause to watch the operation, he would observe one man operating a machine which excavated, laid the pipe, and covered the trench. He could well wait to see whether the grass would not also be planted as the final operation.

The narration on my high school days should give you some idea of the changes which have taken place during the past three decades. "When I was in high school," things did seem wonderful, and for the age in which I lived as a high school student, they were. However, the present provides many opportunities for personal growth and preparation to live in a constantly evolving new and exciting kind of world. My high school mates and I can only hope to adjust to the "new world". But, you, my young friends of today, have the challenge to help to create it.

The Administrative Intern

Mr. Everett M. Williams

Mr. Everett M. Williams was born in New Orleans, Louisiana. He attended the parochial schools in this city, the St. Augustine Seminary of Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, and Xavier University, from which he received both the Bachelor and the Master of Arts Degrees; the latter was received in the summer of 1954.

Mr. Williams has taught at Grambling College, at Xavier University, and at the Walter L. Cohen Senior High School. For the past three years, he has served as the Assistant Principal of the McDorogh #35 Senior High School.

Presently, Mr. Williams is engaged in a special project - "The Administrative Internship Program." This Program is directed by the National Association of Secondary School Principals. It is noteworthy that this is the first time such a program has been inaugurated in any Louisiana school.

The Editor Speaks

We now stand on the threshold of a new era--an era distinguished by certain important and significant happenings and an era that challenges all students to perform to their maximum ability.

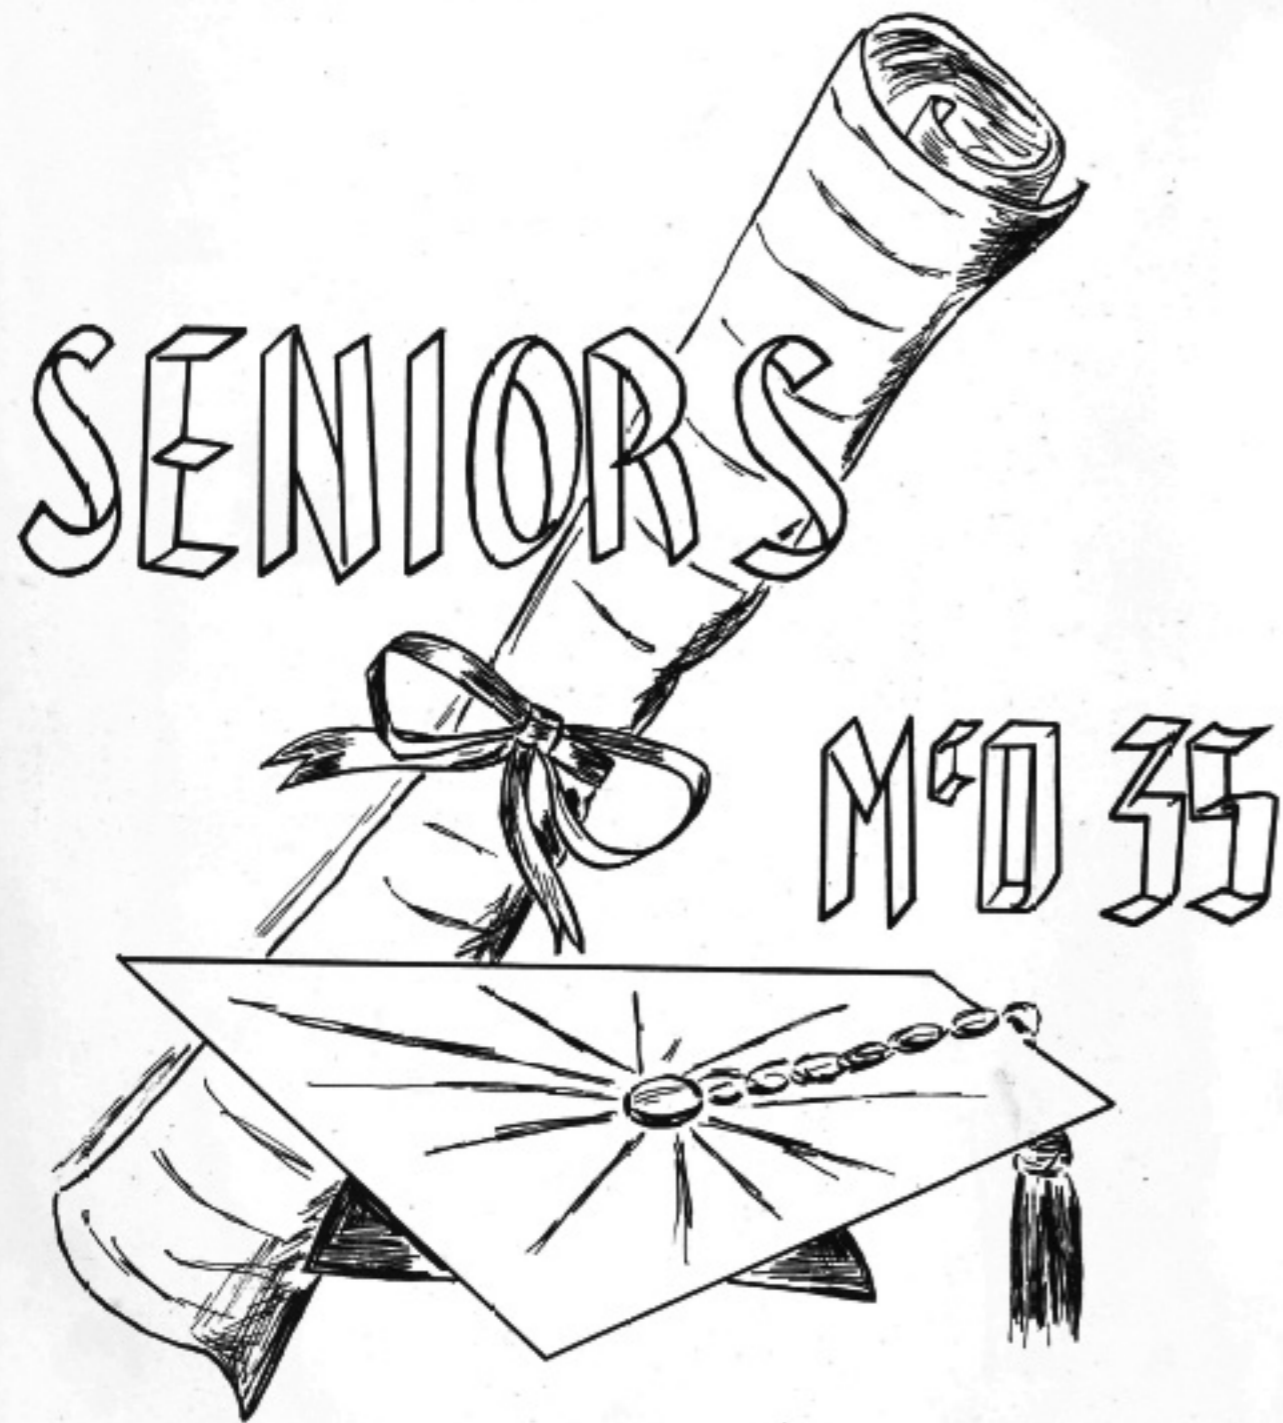

Certain happenings at the onset of this school year made most Roneaglets develop an awareness for accepting the challenges of this new era.

Many Roneaglets as well as well-seasoned Roneagles were much concerned after Hurricane Betsy visited our building on South Rampart Street. This concern probably stemmed from the fact that great numbers of our friends and comrades from other high schools teased, vexed and tormented us about the future of our school. Through all of this we have come from our new location, 600 Camp Street, we proudly present this 1966 "Roneagle."

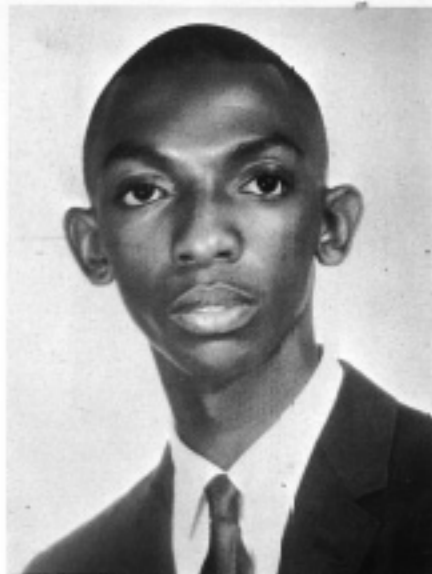

The yearbook gives an overall view of the McDonogh 35 program. As the pages are turned, one should be able to envision some of the dreams and aspirations of those who are pictured. He should certainly see some new dimensions in education. Also, he will note the various ways in which the students have been involved in program areas in order that they can be better prepared to serve in this new age.

This Yearbook should be treasured by all. It represents activities and ideas which were conceived in one setting and then shifted to another. Then too, it will be a reminder of the Roneagles' heritage and should raise some questions about the future. Finally, it can be a source of inspiration to Roneaglets as they work within the framework of this new era!

Chemistry in a history class?

Do, Re, Me, Fa, Sol, La, Ti, Do!

A "O" for her, a "100" for him.

Should I cut, or shouldn't I?

I'm not going to change that grade!
