'67 RONEAGLE

McDonogh # 35 High School

New Orleans, Louisiana

Volume 3

As written by Miss Myrtle Watts for the initial issue of the yearbook in 1928

As the centuries, one after another, glide by, revelations more and more marvelous are brought to the ken of men. Perhaps the most extraordinary discovery of modern times is that of the Roneagle. This bird, beyond doubt the mightiest, swiftest, and most resourceful of all winged creatures, resembles in some respects the great American bald eagle. The Roneagle, however, is far larger in size; and it possesses a tremendous advantage over the other bird in that, through Mother Nature's inventiveness, its body - head, eyes, beak, breast, wings, talons, bones, muscles, nerves, and organs - is fashioned (marvel of marvels!) in Solid Iron! Because of this singular trait - which appears more miraculous when discovers the bird accomplishing feats which, because of the great weight of even the iron feathers of its mighty pinions, would reasonably seem impossible - the creature has become known as the Roneagle - the iron eagle.

In only one spot in the world, the grim and sturdy structure known as Mc Donogh Thirty-five High and Normal School,¹ has the Roneagle chosen its aerie. There, beset with dangers before which weaker birds must flee, the Roneagle lives and thrives, requiring five years² to evolve from the egg to the adult stage. Persons who have braved the blistering heat, the bitter cold, the furious stormblast, one or another of which, amid thunder and lightning, constantly vents its fury about the haunt of the Roneagle, have been astounded to find that the bird feeds only on hard, cold iron. This substantial diet contributes much to the development of the bird's prodigious prowess and resourcefulness.

The first step in the life-cycle of the Roneagle is known as the embryonic stage. Twice a year - in early September and late January -³ a number of eggs are brought into the world. From what has been said before, it will not seem strange to the reader to learn that these eggs are encased in shells of glittering steel, the reflection from which, as they glisten in the sunlight, is too strong for the naked eye. Each egg, protected by its strong armor from the dangers mentioned above, contains molten iron, which gradually takes the form of a tiny Roneagle.

By the end of a year⁴ the young creature has acquired enough strength to break its steel prison, and a young Roneaglet finds itself for the first time in the world of living things. The bird is, of course, much dependent; and it becomes the duty of old and weathered Roneagles to bring to its nest daily portions of baby iron-food.

A year passes by, and the Roneaglet reaches the third stage⁵ of its life history. The sinews and the jagged iron feathers of its wings are now sufficiently strong for the young creature to make its first attempts at flying. By the end of the season it has become reasonably sure of itself in the air beyond its nest. And what rejoicing fills the sky when old Roneagles make known the fact that the young bird has acquired enough strength and skill to be let fly away unaccompanied by older Roneagles!

During the fourth step⁶ in the life-cycle of the marvelous bird, it seems to find peculiar delight in out-distancing other winged creatures in flight. Miles above the clouds, unconscious of wind or rain, or snow, its mighty pinions majestically outstretched, the Roneagle wings its way through the thin air with the speed of lightning.

Finally, during the fifth year⁷ after the laying of the great steel-shelled egg, the Roneagle emerges into the adult stage. Now the bird, having nourished itself for two years⁸ on the most substantial of iron-food; having been hardened by storm and sleet, by summer's feverish heat and winter's deadening cold; and having gained in strength and initiative through participation in numerous contests, becomes a most wonderful creature. Perhaps some intrepid aviator having piloted his plane far, far above the top of the world, has seen an adult Roneagle.⁹ It has by this time taken part in many struggles and has conquered countless adversaries. It is probably seen perched on some lofty mountain summit, its mighty talons cending the jagged rock, its great iron wings coldly glittering, and its fierce steel eyes, alive with lightning, intently seeking among the far distant stars new worlds to conquer.

¹From 1924 to 1931, Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School offered a two-year Normal Training Course, a teacher training course.

²From September 1951 to present time, an eaglet now takes three years to evolve from the egg to the adult stage.

³Pupils were once admitted at mid-term. The Orleans Parish School Board discontinued mid-term promotion and mid-term graduation in 1951.

"Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us

- Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

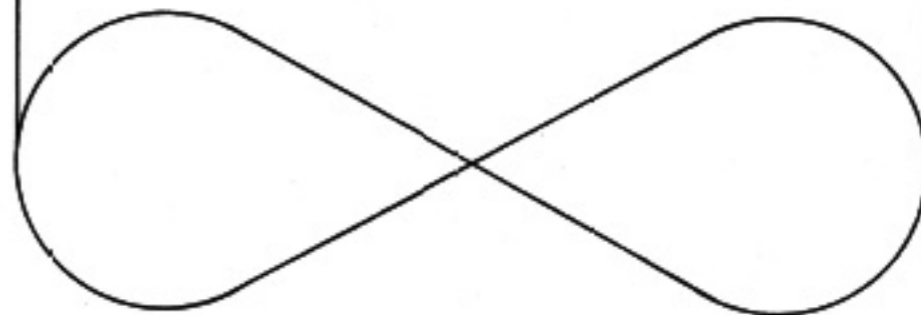

DEDICATION

We, at the Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School, seek to enrich the lives of all. We, too, seek to develop each member of the school family physically, socially, morally, and spiritually.

Through our school philosophy, the door of opportunity is opened to all; through our cultural program an aesthetic understanding for beauty in nature and in philosophy is promoted; through our academic program an appreciation for the American heritage as well as for the desire to grow and build and create is revealed, developed and exalted...

Since the Mc Donogh 35 Senior High School, too, seeks cultural, as well as educational enlightenment, the staff of the Yearbook dedicates the '67 Roncagle to "The Great Society."

Editor Speaks

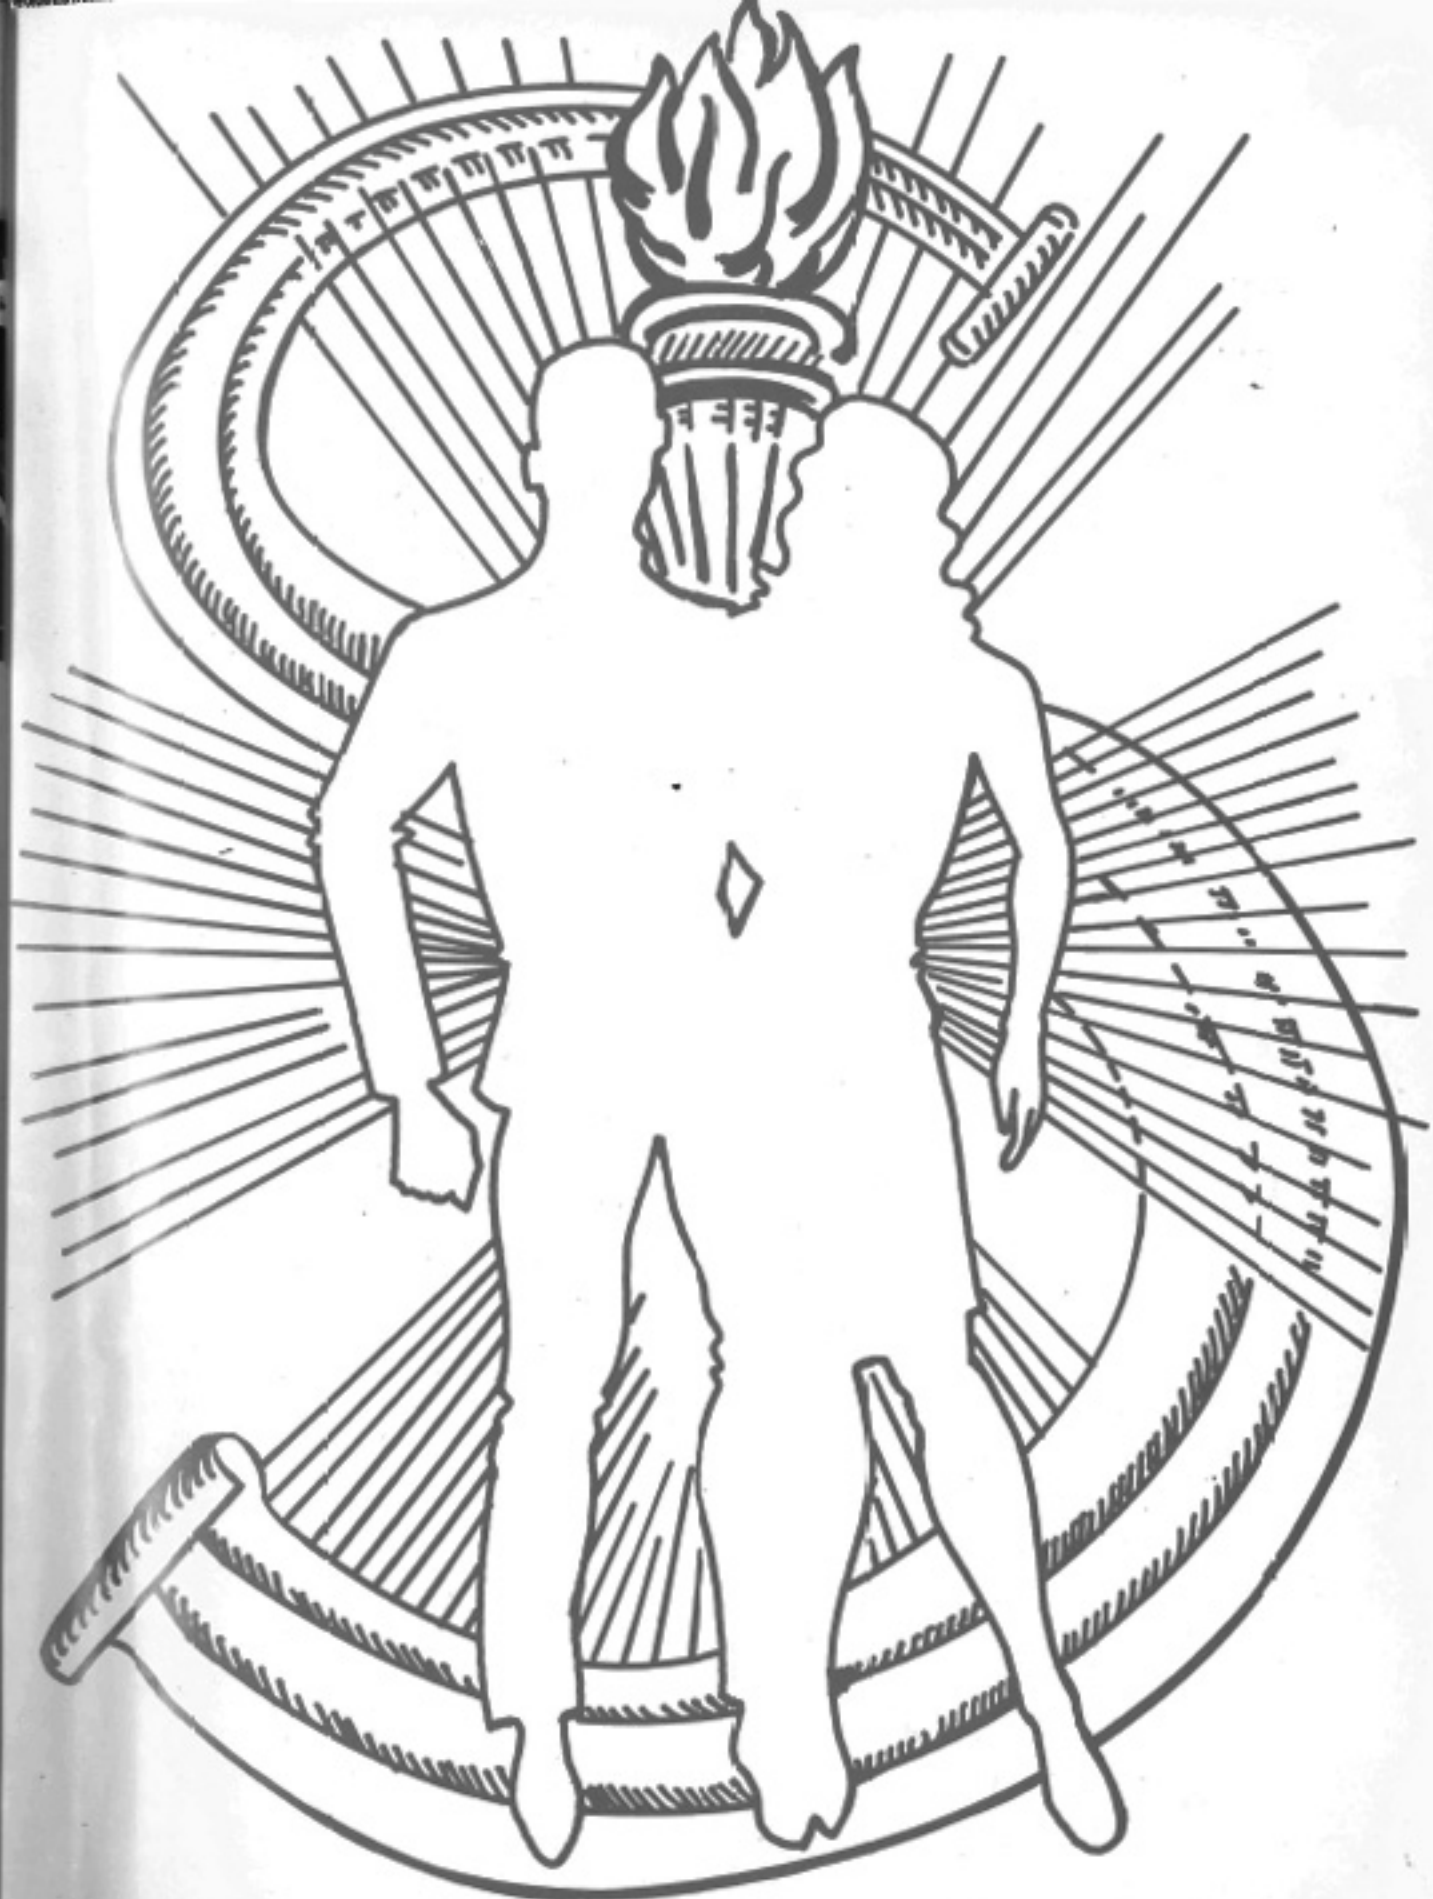

The Class of 1967 has not the distinction of being the first graduating class of the McDonogh #35 Senior High School. Neither has it the distinction of being the last. Nevertheless, it does have two unique qualities of which it is proud - flexibility and versatility.

Flexibility means the ability to twist or to bend without breaking or the virtue of being able to compromise. The Class of '67 has shown this since it had to make environmental adjustments and to become a paragon of knowledge, wisdom, and grace. What other class has had to set an example for three underclass divisions?

Versatility is the ability to do many things well. Within the class are many students who have displayed proficiency in scholarship, leadership, athletics, and co-operation. Within the class are many who will someday aspire to great heights because of this trait. Yet it is not specific individuals who render the class unique; it is in reality, the class as a whole.

These traits have given the staff and the student body of the McDonogh 35 Senior High School reason of which to be proud. Truly, the Class of 1967 will never be classified as "mediocre" and will leave an indelible mark in the history of the McDonogh 35 Senior High School.
